STATISTICS RELATIVE TO

THE APPLE PROCESSING INDUSTRY

IN NEW YORK STATE

1956 - 1965

This report presents statistics on the apple processing industry in New York State (including cider mills, canneries, freezing plants, evaporators, and other processors) for each crop year from 1956 through 1965.

New York State processors received 12.1 million bushels of apples in their plants in 1965 compared with 10.6 million bushels in 1964. Receipts in eastern New York were 28 percent more than in 1964, while in western New York they were about 13 percent more. About two percent of the total 1965 receipts, came from outside the State.

Fifty-nine percent of the apples processed were used for canning and applesauce, including baby food; 26 percent for cider and juice. Drying, freezing, and other products accounted for the rest. Statistics for the industry engaged in the daily preparation and shipment of fresh sliced apples to pie bakers are included here only when this operation takes place in or near the apple producing areas. In New York City (for which data are not included) this business is carried on quite extensively, using open market or contract purchases of apples throughout the year.

There were 153 plants making cider or other products during the 1965 season compared with 145 in 1964.

The Crop Reporting Service acknowledges with appreciation the generous cooperation of the people in the apple processing industry whose reports have made possible this summary.

1/ Apples received at a plant and then transferred to another plant for processing are included only in plant where processed. One bushel is assumed to equal 48 pounds.

2/ Among other products for which these apples were used are jelly, apple butter, mincemeat, and fresh sliced apples for pies in upstate areas. Included also are small amounts of loss and shrinkage and some apples sorted out for sale as fresh fruit.

3/ Included in other products to avoid disclosure of individual firm operations.

4/ Revised.
